

Bio - Kim Kelley Thompson

Kim Kelley Thompson is a business and personal development coach whose specialty is helping people get out of their heads and into action so they can achieve their goals and realize their potential. She brings 32 years of experience as a business owner, sales trainer and coach to develop effective leadership, efficiency and success in individuals and teams.

Kim blends inspiration with practicality as both are necessary to create lasting transformation. She believes that when we become aware of the patterns and habits that are dictating our lives, we can raise our standards and elevate our behavior. We are then able to take the focused, committed action that leads to desired results.

As a multiple business owner, award winning documentary producer, and mom, Kim understands the value of vision, leadership, communication, systems and processes.

Raising four children by herself, while managing a multimillion dollar event company and starting her own business, enabled Kim to become adept at simplifying the complex and breaking through the mental obstacles that stifle success.

Kim's presentations have been called intuitive, magnetic, inspiring and engaging. Her goal is to ignite the leadership qualities within each individual helping them raise their personal standards and tap their true potential.
